EAST END 1888: A YEAR IN A LONDON BOROUGH AMONG THE LABOURING POOR BY WILLIAM J. FISHMAN PDF

East End 1888 is essential reading for anyone interested in social history and the history of London. Professor William Fishman shows what life was like for the labouring poor in the year of Jack the Ripper and the Matchgirls' strike, when poverty, crime, disease and social unrest were at their height. The communal life of the street, pubs and clubs softened the brutality of the daily grind, where the sweatshop, the ghetto, the poor tenement — and the threat of the workhouse - were ever present in an age of genuine "Victorian values".

"In the hands of virtually any other historian this would have been a depressing book. But Bill Fishman has a gift, shared with Richard Cobb, of writing about horrible subjects in such a way as to leave you thinking that there is a God in heaven after all."

Norman Stone, Sunday Times

"Fishman's admirable book not merely enlightens us about a dead past, and excites our indignation on behalf of wrongs long since righted. It shows us a past in which we can all too clearly see the present."

Leon Garfield, Times Higher Educational Supplement

"A brilliantly perceptive study... a marvellous, vivid account of the poverty stricken world of the East End, not only scholarly and well documented but also very easy to read"

East London of Jack the Ripper

By steeljam@cix.co.uk

William Booth and others started their campaign for social reform in 1888 along with Barnardo. This book reviews the contemporary sources; books, papers, journals and official publications; to produce a picture of how the people in the East of London lived. These were the lowest of the low, the dregs who were punished for sleeping on the streets - even though they had no place to go. Slave labour and sweat houses were rife with conditions we would only now tolerate in dance clubs - packed together and far too hot.
