Decent

By Kane

For the purposes of studying for step 1s (which is what I bought them for), these cards are way too detailed. They give you more information than you need to know and are simply too much of a time sink to go through. You DO NOT need these cards to get the 240+/99 that everyone craves for the boards. I personally ended up using Lange's pharmacology cards and really love them.

If you are genuinely interested in pharmacology then these cards are comprehensive and wonderful to have. But lets be honest here. In an age of PDAs and laptops, you could google, epocrats, dynamed, etc drug information on your phone or computer faster than referring to these cards.

An excellent study aid

By S. Adams

I got PharmCards for my pharmacology class and for step 1 of boards. I have found them very helpful so far. My one complaint is that they are very glossy so it's difficult to highlight or write your own notes on them without smearing ink everywhere. I've found that the Sharpie pens work best for underlining or adding notes. I like how key features such as mechanisms of action are illustrated on the back of the cards.

I like 'em!

By J. POLLARD

These are very detailed pharncards, kind of like a Pharm book on cards. In my opinion, the cards do a good job of explaining concepts that are frequently tested (e.g. USMLE-Qbank). I have the Lange cards too. The main difference between the two sets is that the Lange cards have a case-study on the front side (which is nice).

They could probably supplant your Katzung/Trevor Board Review Book. Be aware though, they do not include all side effects that are commonly tested (e.g. hyperkalemia increases toxicity of group I arrhythmic drugs). For the most part, the errors are minimal. I did notice one on the carbonic anhydrase inhibitors (e.g. Acetazolamide card was incomplete and the equilibrium of CO₂ and H₂O was incorrect).

They are 4x6 cards that are large, which is a plus or minus depending on your preference. I personally use them while working out on elliptical or riding the bus...

Major points of emphasis are BOLDED or ITALICIZED, which is nice. A good deal of material on the cards is redundant on multiple cards (e.g. α₁-receptor agonism --> Gq --> PLC/DAG --> PKC + Ca²⁺ --> sm contraction, etc.).

It is a big stack of cards and somewhat intimidating at first, but again, there is a good deal of redundancy in them. For my step 1 review, I am using these cards as well as Katzung/Trevor Board Review.
