Mosaics of the city, fragments of the soul

By Dora Jelenszky

Venna's collection of poems in "Wandering Thoughts" not only manages to portray The Big Apple's reality through mosaics she picks up, but it also is a journey through one's soul. Her deliberately fragmented observations of the actual life of New York City expresses the upbeat rush of this pulsating world that paints a complete picture of this dominant "chaotic (dis)order" by introducing vivid contrasts of her own soulful thoughts that are pure and compassionate. Veena's words make the reader stop and think, recognize and urge, hear and also listen...makes you wAnder.
